BRITISH CARRY OUT THE HEAVIEST
AIR RAID ON BERLIN

Raid Was One of The Longest
Of the War and Did
Much Damage

LASTED NEARLY 5 HRS.

Drop 49 Explosive and 27 Incendiary Bombs Over
The City

By Pierre J. Huss

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, Oct. 8.—(INS).—Preliminary casualty lists of 15 or 20 killed and many injured testified today to the heaviest British air raid yet carried out against the German capital.

The British attack was one of the longest of the war and damaged warehouses and railroad establishments in the city.

It was reported that 49 explosive and 27 incendiary bombs were dropped, mostly on workmen's quarters in the northern section of the city, according to German claims.

According to officials, the British planes arrived over the city shortly before midnight and kept up their assault for four and three-quarter hours.

The raid demonstrated the city's new anti-aircraft defenses, which carried out a systematic form of fire while searchlight beams criss-crossed in an organized pattern which appeared to increase the difficulties of the raiders in approaching their targets.

The British planes kept at high altitudes with the exception of individual planes which dived occasionally to escape from a barrage of ground fire or drop flares.

Mrs. William DuHamel, who has been in attendance at the 66th state convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union at Wilkesburg, will return to Bristol this evening. Mrs. DuHamel represented Bristol Union.

Nearly 1,000 were in attendance at the opening session in South Avenue Methodist Church, Wilkesburg, last week, including visitors and delegates.

Mrs. Ella B. Black, state president, presided.

Mrs. A. F. Leonard, president of Allegheny County W. C. T. U., praised Wilkesburg, during her address, stating it is exceptional to find a community of 30,000 kept so clean by the vote of the people, with neither saloons nor Sunday movies.

State directors on one occasion, presented a pageant, following Mrs. Black's report and annual message.

Dr. Roy E. Manne preached the convention sermon on Sunday morning; and during the evening, S. K. McKee, special agent in charge of Pittsburgh office of the F. B. I., addressed the women.

Republicans Gain In County Registrations

The Republican party in Bucks County has gained 3,002 new registrations over the number of Democrats registered since the primary election. This is attributed to the great interest in the Republican candidate for president, Wendell L. Willkie.

Climaxing a hectic period of registration, which ended on Saturday afternoon, Robert F. Detweiler, clerk in the Registration Department in the Administration Building, at Doylestown, today revealed that the Republicans have made a gain of 4,446 since the Primary Election.

The present registrations are as follows: Republicans, 35,296; Democrats, 18,086, and no party, 2,086.

According to Clerk Detweiler, the registrations March 30, this year, were as follows: Republican, 30,850; Democrat, 16,642; other parties, 1,710.

Clerk Detweiler reported 264 registrations were handled on Friday and Friday evening when 318 men and women registered.

Other registration figures: Thursday, 90, and Wednesday and Wednesday evening, 200.

There were 183 registrations taken care of on Friday evening.

Announcement was made that no registrations can be made now until December 5, the law stipulating that none can be handled until 30 days after the General Election.

According to the present registration figure of the Democrats of 18,086 and the figure in March, when it was 16,642, the Democrats increased their registrations of 1,444.

The Republicans' gain in registration is 15 per cent, and the Democrats six per cent.

Great Britain Advises Japan of Road Opening

Tokyo, Oct. 8.—Invoking an immediate barrage of hostile press criticism, Great Britain today advised Japan of her decision to reopen the Burma Road for arms shipment to China on October 17th.

An official communique issued by the foreign office said—

"Sir Robert Craigie, British Ambassador to Japan, called on Foreign Minister Matsuoaka this morning.

"On instructions from his government, Sir Robert advised Mr. Matsuoaka that Great Britain does not see its way clear to renew the British-Japanese agreement concerning closure of the Burma Road when it expires on October 17th."

The influential Japan Times ascribed Britain's decision to a desire to "save face" before China and to support the Chungking government as the only force resisting Japan "together with the United States."

RAF Violently Attacks
Germany

London, Oct. 8.—In pursuance of the "master plan" designed to knock out the Reich's war and industrial machine, Royal Air Force bombers violently attacked military objectives in Berlin and other places last night and early today, according to the British Air Ministry.

Disclosing that more than 100 heavy bombs were dropped on three power stations in Berlin during a four and three-quarter hours attack, the Air Ministry said—

"Yesterday our bombers attacked large concentrations on the Dutch coast and shipping at Le Havre.

"In the course of routine patrol, coastal command aircraft shot down an enemy fighter in flames.

"Last night strong forces of bombers made successful attacks on military objectives in Berlin. A large fire was caused in the Tempelhof goods yards. "Several industrial plants were attacked among other key points.

"Other RAF forces heavily bombed the Plokker works in Amsterdam, the naval docks at Wilhelmshaven, goods yards at Hamm, Soest, Mannheim, and Gremberg and other ports and shipping along numerous French docks."

THREE AIRPORTS MAY BE LOCATED IN COUNTY

Bristol, Doylestown and Quakertown Included In The Proposed List

PART OF DEFENSE PLANS

Is Bristol going to have an airport? That is the question which has interested many since the publication of news stories to the effect that Bristol was included in a list made public by the government.

In a national plan for defense is included the improvement of airports throughout Pennsylvania at a total cost of $48,116,000. The plans are all tentative but in Congress the House has approved an appropriation of $80,000,000 and it is believed that the Senate will approve a like amount. This money is to permit the construction of airports to begin the program.

A joint Army-Navy and Commerce Department board would do the actual selection of the places where part of the estimated national expenditure of $388,000,000 will be made. Where new airports are to be built, land must be supplied by the local community.

Airports by classes are defined by the Civil Aeronautics Authority according to the aircraft they can accommodate, as follows:

Class 1. Small privately owned craft; landing strips 1800 to 2500 feet long.

Class 2. Larger size privately owned craft and small size transportation aircraft, up to 20-place; landing strips 2500 to 3500 feet.

Class 3. For present day transportation aircraft, up to 30-place; landing strips 3500 to 4500 feet; will safely accommodate medium bombardment and pursuit planes.

Class 4. For the largest and fastest civil and military aircraft now in use, and those planned for the immediate future, 50-place or larger; landing strips 4500 feet long and over.

Under provision of the new program change in the classification of the airport is shown in the numerals after the name, the first figure being the present classification.

Bristol, 0-3. Preparation of land, $410,000; paving, $263,000; lighting, $18,000; radio, $2500; miscellaneous, $90,000; total, $783,500.

Quakertown, 0-2. Preparation of land, $75,000; paving, $134,000; lighting, $15,000; miscellaneous, $20,000; total, $244,000.

Doylestown, 0-2. Preparation of land, $130,000; paving, $134,000; lighting, $15,000; miscellaneous, $25,000; total, $304,000.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 8.—(INS).—Award of a $19,410,10 contract to Tri-County Constructors, Elkins Park, for construction of 27 of a mile of approaches and two concrete bridges on Route 132, between Davisville, Churchville and Southampton, in Warminster and upper Southampton townships, Bucks county, was announced today by the State Highways Department.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

The Subsidized Millions

Washington, Oct. 7. EVERY week now the Federal pay roll leaps ahead. It passed the million mark in June. Last week there were approximately 1,045,000 jobholders, exclusive of army, navy, judiciary, Congress and WPA workers.

At the rate they are being put on now it seems safe to forecast that before November 5—election day—the total will reach 1,075,000.

IT may go higher than that. The increase since 1936 has been more than a hundred thousand. The increase since 1932 has been over one hundred per cent. But the rate of increase has been greatly accelerated in the last few months. The chief reason, of course, is the defense program, which is expanding the governmental structure in various ways and daily adding to the workmen in Government navy yards and other departments.

No amount of Presidential talk about "non-political speeches" and Presidential appeals for "nonpartisan co-operation" alters the fact that the great bulk of the people who have been put on the pay rolls since last April, and of the thousands who will be put on in the next five weeks, are recommended by New Deal politicians either in Congress or out.

In brief, these new jobs, created by the defense program, like the old jobs, created by New Deal experimentation and expenditures, are no chosen on a non-political or nonpartisan basis. They get on through the Administration politicians and become part of the Administration machine.

CONSIDERATION of these facts led the reliable United States News to estimate the other day that

SELECTIVE SERVICE

House to Hear Regulations Explained

BOARD IN EACH DIST

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 8.—Three hundred and fifty volunteers who will care for selective service registration throughout Bucks County on October 16th, met in the county court house, last evening, when the regulations pertaining to such registration of men between 21 and 36 years of age was explained.

The gathering to which individuals were called by Bucks County Commissioners, included various judges and inspectors of elections from various polling places in the county, also a few other volunteers.

The registrars will on the 16th of this month, the date set for national registration, register all men eligible in Bucks County for military service. They will sit at the various polling places.

Regulations were explained last evening by the commissioners, with Commissioner William O. Hunsicker, conducting a roll call of the workers. The only district not represented by election board members was Dublin, which board it is said refused to serve. Other volunteers were secured in the district, however.

County Solicitor Gordon H. Luckenbill, and county commissioners Joseph D. Baker and Dr. Calvin W. Moyer, and commissioner's clerk, Ernest H. Harvey, outlined the regulations. Mr. Moyer explained in detail what is necessary. To each worker was given sufficient number of registration blanks which the commissioners believe will be needed in the respective districts to care for the eligibles. Posters, books of instructions, etc., were also distributed.

Dr. Kunsman Dies At A Trenton Hospital

MORRISVILLE, Oct. 8.—Dr. William H. Kunsman, widely-known Morrisville physician and justice of the peace, died Sunday morning at 4.40 o'clock at Mercer Hospital, Trenton, following a stroke which he suffered late Saturday afternoon while driving his automobile.

He was turning his car around on the river road below Morrisville when he struck a hedge and slumped over in his car. Barton Ivins, of R. D. 1, drove by and, sensing something was wrong, found Dr. Kunsman unconscious. Dr. James M. Klenk, of Morrisville, was summoned and Dr. Kunsman was rushed to Mercer Hospital.

One of Morrisville's oldest residents, Dr. Kunsman, at 81, was still a practicing physician and justice of the peace. He was born at Ironville, Pa., the son of John and Miria Kunsman, in 1858. Graduating from Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, with honors in 1884, he later took a course on skin diseases at the University of Pennsylvania. Dr. Kunsman started active practice in Erwinna, Pa., in 1884, and moved to Morrisville in 1886, where he was Bucks County coroner for nine years. He has engaged in private practice for 54 years and has been justice of the peace for over 25 years. Dr. Kunsman was a member of the Bucks County Medical Society.

Dr. Kunsman is survived by his wife, the former Miss Mary C. Lear; a daughter, Mrs. Katherine Busche, of this place; two sisters, Mrs. Ann Zoller and Mrs. Mary Frantz, both of Hellertown, Pa., and three brothers, John P. and Jacob, of Hellertown, and Seward, of Bethlehem.

Funeral services will be conducted from his home, 38 East Bridge street, on Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock. Services will be in charge of the Rev. Charles H. Weiler, pastor of the Methodist Church, assisted by the Rev. Jesse Wester, pastor of the First Baptist Church and the Rev. Clifford G. Pollock, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. Burial will be in Morrisville Cemetery. Friends may call this evening at the residence.

Playing Safe!

(By "The Stroller")

A Garden street woman, when her little girl becomes too persistent in trying to secure attention when mother is busy, frequently puts the child off with the phrase "Don't bother mother now; she's busy."

Yesterday as a workman was engaged about the place, the child got into mischief near the workman, who threatened to tell her mother. Then came the admonition from the tot: "Don't bother mother now, she's busy," evidently realizing what punishment might be in store.

Several Organizations Express
Willingness to Participate
In The Affair

Bristol's big Hallowe'en parade and celebration began to assume concrete proportions last evening when more than 25 members of the general committee and representatives from various organizations of the Borough and surrounding communities met at the Legion home here to map out details for the affair.

John Hardy, general chairman of the committee, outlined the details to the organization representatives. He indicated that the parade and celebration will be held here on the evening of Thursday, October 31st, and stressed the importance of having groups and floats from organizations from every section of lower Bucks County.

"Although the Business Men's Association is sponsoring the celebration we want the parade to be a 100 per cent community affair," Mr. Hardy declared. We would like to see a delegation from every organization in this territory in the line of march. And we also want floats from every mill and manufacturing plant in the parade. And don't forget—there will be substantial cash prizes for the winning units and displays."

Announcement was made that the next meeting of the general committee will be held this Thursday evening at the Legion Home at 7 p. m. All members of the committee are asked to be present promptly at seven, and representatives from every organization in this section are also invited to be present.

All committees for the celebration will be named at this meeting Thursday evening. The date for the drive for contributions for funds for prizes money will also be announced Thursday evening.

Dr. John J. Hargrave, Rotary Club representative, told the committee last evening, "I am sure the Rotary Club will stand back of the move in every way possible." Dr. Hargrave, who is vice-president of the Rotary Club, was present as a representative of this organization in the absence of the Rotary Club president, Frank Pfeiffer, who is ill.

A representative from the Moose, Raymond Jones, stated that if time permitted he believed that this organization would participate in the parade. He was named as a member of the general committee.

The Bristol Lions Club, represented by George Sottung, will have a float in the parade. "We are with the program 100 per cent," Mr. Sottung said. Clifford Hagerman, chief of the Bristol Consolidated Fire Co., stated that

Wallace and Flum Store
To Change Location

One of the oldest established businesses on Mill street is to change locations with the removal of the Wallace and Flum store from 241 Mill street. The real estate has been sold to an unnamed client of the office of Eastburn & Blanche, real estate agents. Neither Mr. Eastburn or Mr. Wallace would divulge the purchaser of the property as it was stated only an "agreement of sale has been signed."

It was rumored on the street that the McCrory Company is to occupy the premises, after alterations have been completed. This could not be confirmed.

The store at 241 Mill street has been occupied as a grocery store for over 50 years and has for a long time rated as doing one of the biggest grocery businesses in Bristol. Frank Flum has been at the location for 35 years, first as a meat cutter, then for eight years as a partner with Robert Brudon. Then Flum became associated with Edward Wallace and the partnership continued for 12 years. Mr. Flum has sold his interest to Mr. Wallace, who plans to continue the business at a new location. Mr. Wallace has been employed and in business at the location for 32 years. He started in the business with the late George L. Horn, then was employed by Groff & Brudon and then formed the partnership of Brudon and Wallace, which in turn was succeeded by the present partnership of Wallace and Flum.

Mr. Flum will retire.

Mr. Wallace today could not give the location to which he expects to move the business, but stated definitely that he will continue in the business and will continue to serve the same large clientele with the same high grade of food products for which the firm has been noted for so many years.

WILLKIE HITS A THIRD TERM

Wendell Willkie's speeches, as he enters upon the crucial month of his campaign, exemplify the increasing fervor and force of his fight to preserve the American Republic.

After seemingly sinking into the background, the third term—continuance in power of the New Deal and President Roosevelt, "who have constantly sought more power for themselves and the chief executive"—is placed in the foreground of the present great American political struggle.

In discussing this menace to America Willkie uses probably the plainest speech yet on record from a public man's lips. Let American women think of the situation of German women, he said . . . "relegated to the kitchen, breeders of soldiers . . . their children taken from them when infants of six or seven—poured into the state machine, turned out as regimented fanatics—born and raised to be eggs in a war machine."

That happens to women when democracies are replaced by dictatorships, with government by force substituted for government by law. And how, Willkie's argument runs—getting to the political point—does the substitution come about? Lack of faith in democracy spreads, he says, especially in the youth of lands; a cold, ruthless cynicism replaces it—a cynicism of which Hitler is the great symbol. Says Willkie:

"Europe is dominated by the colossal cynicism of Adolf Hitler. He is a man who does not hesitate to accomplish his ends by breaking his solemn promises, by murdering his associates, by converting the youth of Germany to highly trained gangsters and by laying waste to peaceful lands that lie across his path."

Willkie sees America also "infected with cynicism"—run by "a little group of cynics called the New Dealers," saying "we know how to govern better than the people know how to govern" seeking to keep and increase their power by trick appeals, by "the vote-getting power of the corrupt political machines of Flynn, Hague, Kelly-Nash and Pendergast," by "the votes of unemployed, the recipients of government relief."

Dangers within, he argued, just such forces as caused the fall of European democracies, threaten the United States. "For seven and a half years," he said, "we have gone down the road to bankruptcy. And now we are confronted with the claim that a third term is indispensable. If that be true, the American way of life is passing. We shall betray our age and generation if we allow that to happen."

Willkie is conducting a crusading campaign, stamped with flaming patriotism, proposing bold national government at a time when "we seem to be surrounded by enemies"—but a government renewed and strengthened by a change of Presidents, in accordance with the unbroken American tradition on Presidential tenure.

there will be, by election day, a minimum of 10,000,000 voters directly dependent upon checks from the United States Treasury for all or part of their income. This figure is arrived at in this way:

5,750,000 who receive AAA checks in one form or another.
1,700,000 WPA workers and relief beneficiaries.
1,500,000 old-age pensioners.
1,075,000 Federal pay-roll employees.

In addition, there are a considerable number who have received Government loans and who profit under the stamp plan. And there are the CCC and NYA beneficiaries who, while all of them do not vote themselves, have relatives who do.

IF only two-thirds of these recipients of Government money—say 6,500,000—vote for Mr. Roosevelt, and if each of these 6,500,000 is worth, through his family connections, only one vote besides his own, the number of subsidized voters upon whom Mr. Roosevelt can count would be about 13,000,000. In an election where the total vote will approximate 50,000,000, it will be appreciated that to have 13,000,000 already bought, paid for and in the box—which is what it amounts to—justifies considerable confidence.

IT is a terrific handicap for the opponent of the President in this campaign. Both its size and its significance ought to be understood by the public. No President in history has had a machine even measurably as great. Its potency as a political instrument for the perpetuation of a President in power is the really unanswerable and overpowering argument against the third-term effort. It is so immense an advantage that it makes Mr. Roosevelt's Philadelphia talk about "free elections" being essential to the maintenance of our institution seem ironical, indeed. THE FORGOTTEN FLEET MYSTERY

by Van Wyck Mason

SYNOPSIS

On the wharf in Patuxent, Maryland, ex-Colonel Donald Colby, late A.D.C. to General Gonzalo Gutierrez, beats up Tom Ferguson, burly oysterman, for insulting Geneva Benet, daughter of Capt. Benet of the "Amerika." Ferguson was fired by Benet and infers someone was murdered on the ship. Later, Geneva confides in Colby that she had brought two men from Leonardtown to work for her father. "They were afraid to stay but you wouldn't be," she says. A new look creeps into Colby's eyes. "Young lady," he demands crisply, "shall we talk?" Geneva tells Colby that her father is in charge of a fleet of old liners laid up by the Shipping Board awaiting purchasers. It is impossible to get a watchman since three men have disappeared. Colby takes the job. On the pier, the girl calls to the "Monticello" on which she lives with her father. The ghostlike ships and eerie atmosphere fill Colby with foreboding. Dutton, one of the watchmen, picks up Geneva and Colby in a rowboat. As they near the "Monticello," three shots and a shriek pierce the air. The girl fears for her father. Leaving Geneva on the "Monticello," Colby and Dutton go in search of the captain. The decks of the "Kronprinzessin Cecile" (rechristened the "Mount Vernon") were familiar to Colby. He had heard them echo to the dainty feet of countesses and, later, to the hobnails of American doughboys. In one of the staterooms, Colby is sure he smells blood. Suddenly, he and Mears, the "Mount Vernon's" watchman, hear a faint scraping sound as of an animal stealthily advancing.

CHAPTER VI

On hands and knees they advanced over the gritty naked floor boards and twice halted when vague sounds of activity floated in from what Mears said was a stair landing. The snuffling noise grew louder and went on until it struck Colby's face with tiny acid rivulets.

Mears, a black bull against a black background, recoiled suddenly. "What's wrong?"

"I'm gonna put on the light—" and before Colby could prevent it the other had switched on his flash. Before them was a door, shut tight—an ordinary oak door, but from under it a sticky bright streamlet crawled towards the breathless pair. Colby understood why his companion had started—Mears was wiping his hand on a nearby dust cover.

"Put out that light," Colby's command was trenchant as a surgeon's scalpel. "Want to make a shining target of us?" his heart thudding like the tom-tom of a Sioux.

Mears obeyed and darkness closed in again like a maddening blanket of misty black velvet.

Again a penetrating and ominous silence ruled over the great liner, a silence in which the scurrying of mice and rats along some distant passageway could be distinctly heard. Colby felt Mears creeping up alongside and threw off the safety catch of Hartney's pistol.

"Stay where you are," he whispered, "and turn on the light when I throw open the door."

When five minutes had passed and no sound beyond the mysterious subtle noises had struck the listeners' ears, Colby reached up and felt the door handle make a cold streak across his palm.

"Ready?"

"Check!"

At almost a single motion he pushed open a door, sunk flat onto the dusty floor and threw off the safety catch of Hartney's battered .32. Every sense geared to sharpest he took in the scene when Mears' flashlight shattered the blackness with a stinging blue-white beam. So much had the eerie surroundings affected him that he, whose nerves were generally as cool, almost when he caught a glimpse of a man in a brass-buttoned officer's coat crouching against the wall opposite the door. Just in time he checked himself; the revealed figure, gold toothed, elderly and semi-bald, sat inert, weakly slumped against the rich oak paneling of the passage staring steadily into the light from beneath bushy gray brows. Beyond a blink of blood shot gray eyes the man in the passage made no motion, just sat with gray head sagged forward on chest looking, looking into the light. Colby could wonder at this last attitude when he noted how down the front of the vision's faded blue cotton shirt trickled two bright rivulets that had collected on the floor into a shiny little pool.

"Who's that?" he flung at Mears who had apparently been stricken speechless.

"My God, it—why it's Capt'n Benet."

Benet! Then that curious girl's pronouncement had come true!

"Hey—hold on! better stay where you are," he cautioned in a sibilant whisper when Colby started forward. "Might still be somebody in that passage."

"Worth the risk—that man's going to die any instant." Colby had seen altogether too many men with such a queer luminosity in their eyes. "I'm going to listen to what he has to say."

Despite Mears' protests he, in the uniform coat, darted forward, cast a small near sound, magnified by the unearthly silence of this great liner. He thought it had come from behind a door to his left.

Having long since oriented the hall in his mind, the ex-Colonel halted at a figure only hinted at by the light of a porthole. His arms were around someone who struggled with the ferocity of a trapped animal. Then a fleeting jet of flame lit what had once been the barber shop and a report cracked, deafening as a field piece in that confined space.

Ears ringing and coughing because of the acrid powder fumes, Colby bore his antagonist to the floor and in so doing realized that this was a woman in his arms!

The man just sat with gray head sagged forward on his chest—looking into the light.

"What's wrong?" Mears came forward bravely enough.

"Another one in here—see?"

In silence both the searchers studied a second figure lying face down, with the lower part of the body sprawled across a wide grand staircase, which had once conducted Princes, divas and Pittsburgh millionaires to the glittering first class dining saloon.

"Bring that light here."

Colby knelt by the side of the wounded man whose stertorous breathing they had heard.

Mears objected. "No—let's take a look at this one."

"Don't be a damn fool, he's dead and this man isn't. Can you talk, Captain Benet?" He bent low over the stricken head watchman. "Who shot you?"

The other by a severe effort made a noise, rendered inarticulate by bloody froth rising to his lips, his pale brown eyes, however, glared in fierce fury into Colby's. It was terrible to watch the man's efforts to speak, to read his realization that he was unable to deliver what must have been a vital message. There he was, practically dead with only his eyes alive.

Mears strode over, battered features rigid and bright with sweat and gestured with his automatic. "Come on—we're fools to stay like this," he snapped. "We make swell targets."

"Shut up! Who shot you, Captain?"

Captain Benet's glazing eyes wandered to that shadowy, eloquently lax figure half on the stairs, then wavered and had started to rise when darkness swooped down on the landing like a smothering cloak. Mears' flashlight had gone out!

In a single silent leap Colby was instantly six good feet away from his former position. "Put on that blasted light!" he rasped. "Put it on or I'll drill you."

"Sh-h-h-h," warned one other. "Don't you hear?"

What fixed Colby's attention was

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

The most ingenious set ever to be used in a motion picture was built at Warner Bros. for the spectacular "sea battles" for "The Sea Hawk" starring Errol Flynn and Brenda Marshall, at the Grand Theatre today.

The "indoor ocean" was constructed as a permanent marine stage.

"The Sea Hawk" not only marks the first time that a sea battle has been filmed on dry land, but it is also the first time that a ship has sailed on concrete. This is accomplished by means of tracks and hydraulic rockers concealed below the water line, giving a realistic impression of forward movement and the natural rock and pitch of a large ship in mid-ocean.

RITZ THEATRE

"Manhattan Heartbeat," the 20th Century-Fox film, which comes today to the Ritz Theatre, tells the tender, understandable story of a boy and girl who get married on practically nothing a week and then crash head-on with the harsh realities of married life.

"The Crooked Road" is now at the Ritz, with Edmund Lowe, featured. Lowe is known as "Old Smoothie" because of his sleek, well-groomed characterizations.

BRISTOL THEATRE

Loretta Young meets Melvyn Douglas in her own boudoir . . . and "He Stayed For Breakfast"! That, in essence, is the beginning of one of the sauciest, most delightful comedies ever brought to the screen.

"He Stayed For Breakfast," which opened yesterday at the Bristol Theatre with a supporting cast which includes Alan Marshal, Eugene Pallette and Una O'Connor.

Alexander Hall directed this irresponsible comedy of an irresponsible young man who took a pot-shot at a prominent financier and then was befriended by the financier's estranged wife, because she approved of the idea!

Today's Quiet Moment

(By Howard L. Zepp, Th. M.)

Our Father, we have no doubt at all about the plenitude of Thy resources for men. Wilt Thou forgive us that we are content to be weak, and that we fail to accept daily Thy resources to supplement our weakness and inefficiency. Help us today to claim Thy strength. "Mid all the traffic of the ways, tumults without, within, make in our hearts a quiet place, and come and dwell therein." Amen.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Knoth and daughter, of Elizabeth, N. J., spent Saturday visiting Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Johnson, McKinley street.

Mrs. James Myer, Elmhurst, L. I., has returned home after spending several days as guest of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rogers, Buckley street. Mrs. Myer was formerly Miss Cora Bazzle.

Mr. and Mrs. James McCormick, Lansdowne, spent Friday until Sunday visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Gallagher, Pine street.

"This choice," he adds, "is based upon two thoughts: first that since we have gotten sales rolling, we want to keep them on the go, and second, we know of no quicker way to reach any market than to aim directly at it through the local newspaper."

"You'll understand the first part of our decision when I tell you that thanks to the performance of Nu-Blue Sunoco as well as its advertising, nearly half a million users of other gasolines have changed to this marvel of gasoline chemistry."

"As for the second part of our decision, newspaper advertising enables us to enter almost any buying center and practically overnight direct to our potential customers the message which we know will interest them the most. For instance, at the present time we are asking motorists to ask themselves a very human question—and it's this: 'Why should I pay extra for any gasoline when thousands upon thousands of former buyers of extra-priced gasolines have switched to Nu-Blue Sunoco?'"

PAULIE WALKER TO MEET LARRY LANE IN TRENTON ARENA

Veteran Trenton Middleweight Matched To Fight Trenton Negro

IN A TEN-ROUND BOUT

Efforts Made for Three Years To Match The Two Boys

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 8.—The fight at fistful fans have been clamoring for a reality recently when Promoter Sammy Perro announced that he had signed Paulie Walker, veteran Trenton middleweight, to meet Larry Lane, Trenton Negro light-heavyweight, in a 10-round bout at the Trenton Arena on Monday evening, October 4.

For the past three years attempts have been made to match these two boys but some factor has always appeared at the last minute to ruin plans. Fans have long discussed the respective merits of the two fighters especially since Lane knocked out Eddie (Babe) Risko, former middleweight champion, last year at the arena.

Walker has been in temporary retirement since his kyo victory over Angelo (Tony) Magliano at the arena last fall but the loud spoken Walker promises he'll knock Lane out within five rounds.

An action packed supporting card has been lined up by Promoter Perro with the semi-windup bringing together Johnny Beaton, former amateur champion from Bay Head, N. J., and Babe Kelly, of Riverside. This bout is a rematch between the two boys after Kelly won a close decision over Beaton on the Lane-Overlin card.

Another six rounder will pit Percy Cooper, Trenton Negro featherweight, against Freddie Budassi, promising Trenton puncher.

Three other bouts, including a pair of six round matches and one four rounder, will complete the card.

Prices for this show will be ringside, $1.65, reserved seats, $1.20 and balcony seats, 75c. Reservations can be made by calling Trenton 2-9400.

he would do whatever was possible to help the movement, although it will be impossible for any apparatus to be in the line of march.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Bucks County Rescue Squad, and the Rescue Squad itself were represented by Reba Gobig and Jesse Carr at the meeting last evening. Both representatives promised their support and stated that they would both have units in the parade.

The Daughters of the Colored Elks were represented by Dorothy Bolgani who said that this group would have a unit in the parade.

Harold James, speaking for the Bristol Cadets, said "Just name the time, the place and the date and we'll be there." The Robert W. Bracken Post was represented by William Griffith and Horace Talle, and both declared the support of this group.

Cesar Cianciosi, representing the 5th Ward Club, declared that this group will have a unit in the parade.

Word was also received from M. L. Callanan, Elks' representative, that his organization would participate in the celebration.

Paul Barrett, Knights of Columbus representative, said that this organization would probably take part in the program. "At present there is much interest among our members in the movement," Mr. Barrett stated.

Selective Service Registrars Gather that should additional help be needed, the chief registrar in each district has the power to call for volunteers. It was suggested that inasmuch as schools throughout the United States will not have sessions on that day, that teachers be asked to aid.

Under the regulations every male citizen, and every male alien, residing in the United States, who on the day set for registration is between the ages of 21 and 36, must present himself for registration. A person may register wherever he happens to be at the time.

The commissioners pointed out that in view of the personal sacrifice to be made by the men to be registered for military service, it is deemed fitting that registrations be conducted by citizens who volunteer their services, as a contribution to national defense. Accordingly no compensation will be paid for services of the registrars.

Each precinct in the county has a registration board, with a chief registrar and other registrars, who will sit from seven a. m. until nine p. m., and if necessary keep the registration places open later, or until all are signed up.

It is estimated that one registrar can register 30 persons in the day's period. The size of the board, it was said, should conform to the district. All chief registrars must take an oath, and in turn administer an oath to the other registrars.

British Carry Out Heaviest Air Raid On Berlin

Roof-top observers watched the death-struggle of one bomber which vainly tried to escape from search-light beams.

With heavy shells bursting all around it, this plane dived from 10,000 to 1,000 feet into a hail of automatic gunfire which apparently damaged the controls or injured the pilot. The craft then swerved drunkenly and finally exploded from a direct hit.

Parts of the craft and the mangled bodies of the crew showered to the ground.

At the same time, informed German circles said that German planes were engaged in one of their heaviest night raids on London, using the new "hammer blow" technique devised by Marshal Herman Wilhelm Goering's air force.

Under the all-night battering, it was stated, huge fires were started in London and other sections of the British Isles also were attacked.

Intense anti-aircraft fire greeted the raiders over Berlin, but numerous incendiary and high explosive bombs were dropped and some casualties were caused before the attacking planes were driven off.

While an official statement emphasized that non-military objectives had been hit, it admitted that some bombs struck railway communication centers and supply stores.

"British planes dropped high explosive and incendiary bombs during a night attack on the German capital," the official announcement said.

"They hit two hospitals and several homes as well as warehouses and railway establishments. Resulting fires were quickly controlled."

"Several persons were killed and others were wounded."

"One plane was shot down by anti-aircraft guns."

The length of the raid was attributed to the fact that it marked the first blow ordered by Sir Charles Portal, former head of the R. A. F. bomber command, in his new capacity as chief of the entire British air force.

The British planes, however, ran headlong into newly-organized Berlin raid defenses, directed by one of Goering's ace generals.

Disorders In Roumania

Budapest, Oct. 8.—Labor disorders broke out today throughout Roumania, forcing the Bucharest government to rush troops to various localities to suppress strikes and other forms of violence.

The workers of a great many Roumanian industrial plants have struck, demanding 50 per cent or more in wage increases to meet mounting food prices, and in the coal district of Anina the workers are asking a 100 per cent wage boost.

Authoritative quarters in Berlin characterized as premature a statement yesterday that German troops already were on the way into Roumania. Berlin said today Germany plans to dispatch a model army to Roumania soon "to rebuild and train" that country's army.
